Matching Grant Program

The Matching Grant Program allows a U.S. private and voluntary organization (PVO) to expand a successful program in new places or initiate new projects. It also enables a U.S. PVO to undertake an experimental or innovative project on the cutting edge of developmental efforts that offers potential for learning and replication.

Now in its 23rd year, the Matching Grant Program is the Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation's (PVC's) principal vehicle to help U.S. PVOs develop their community-based programs overseas. Matched dollar-for-dollar by the PVO's own resources, matching grants support programs consistent with the U.S. Agency for International Development's (USAID's) evolving priorities (such as micro-enterprise development and strategic partnerships) and geographical interests (such as the special needs of Africa, Central Asia, and Central America).

The Matching Grant Program awards competitive grants to PVOs to support clearly defined, field-oriented programs. The programs must be fully conceived and incorporate rigorous evaluation criteria. They may be as broad as the overall scope of a PVO's work or as specific as community-based health services or micro-enterprise development, but must stay within USAID's legislative mandate and development priorities.

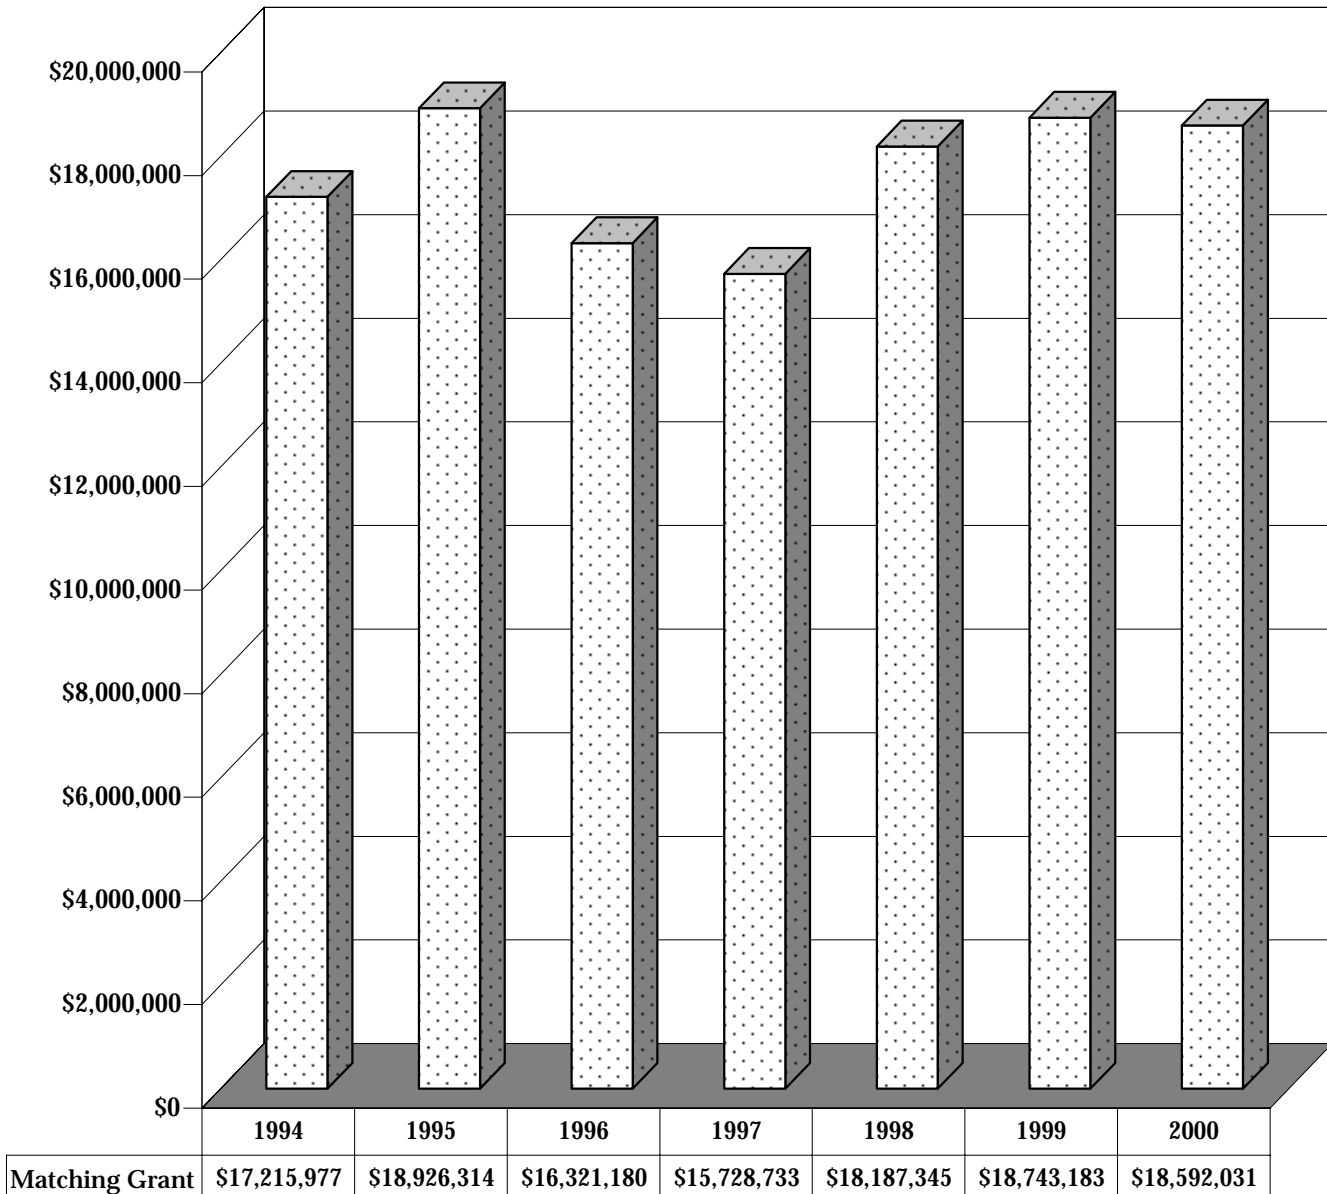

PVOs are awarded matching grants based on their demonstrated ability to implement successful, sustainable development programs. The four major objectives of the Matching Grant Program are:

- to expand and strengthen the field programs of U.S. PVOs to increase sustainability and results in program areas that are consistent with USAID policies and priorities,
- to assist U.S. PVOs to further enhance their planning systems, management systems, and technical competencies so they can carry out development programs,
- to build the capacity of local nongovernmental organizations (NGOs), governmental organizations, and community-based organizations (CBOs) through formalized partnerships with U.S. PVOs, and
- to increase U.S. private resources for development assistance through a combined public/private partnership by matching private contributions on a dollar-for-dollar basis.

Child Survival Program

The Child Survival Grants Program (CSGP) is a unique and productive partnership supporting effective, community-oriented child survival programs that measurably improve infant and child health and nutrition and contribute to the reduction of infant and child mortality.

Since 1985, the Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation in the Bureau for Humanitarian Response (BHR/PVC) has invested congressionally-directed child survival funds in community-based child survival programs implemented by U.S. PVOs and their local partners. The objective of the Child Survival Grants Program (CSGP) is to improve the capacity of U.S. PVOs and their local partners to carry out effective child survival programs that measurably improve infant and child health and nutrition and contribute to the reduction of infant and child mortality in developing countries. Participation in the program strengthens the organizational, managerial, and technical competencies of PVOs in these areas. BHR/PVC works with a broad range of organizations that have a wide spectrum of skills and abilities.

Since the program began, BHR/PVC has funded more than 300 child survival programs in 44 countries with more than 35 PVOs. The rigorous standards of the Child Survival Grants Program challenge PVOs and their local partners to provide higher quality, sustainable, child survival interventions in a variety of program settings: from the smallest, most remote communities to large, district-wide programs. BHR/PVC continually elicits feedback from PVO partners to raise the standards of the program, reflect the realities of the global development situation, and incorporate the experience of the PVOs into program guidelines.

The CSGP aims for:

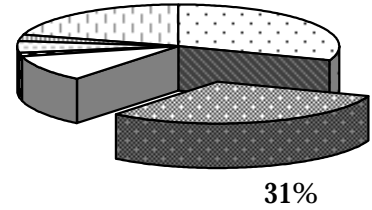

1. CSGP programs that have increasing success in meeting their objectives and which measurably and equitably improve the health of all children and mothers,
2. joint programming of PVOs and USAID operating units for community health activities,
3. increased resource mobilization for PVO child survival activities,
4. increased technical and operational support from PVOs to local partners/NGOs for the design and implementation of child survival programs, and
5. US public awareness of the success of PVO child survival programs.

Priorities for the FY 2001 Child Survival Grants Program are for applications that:

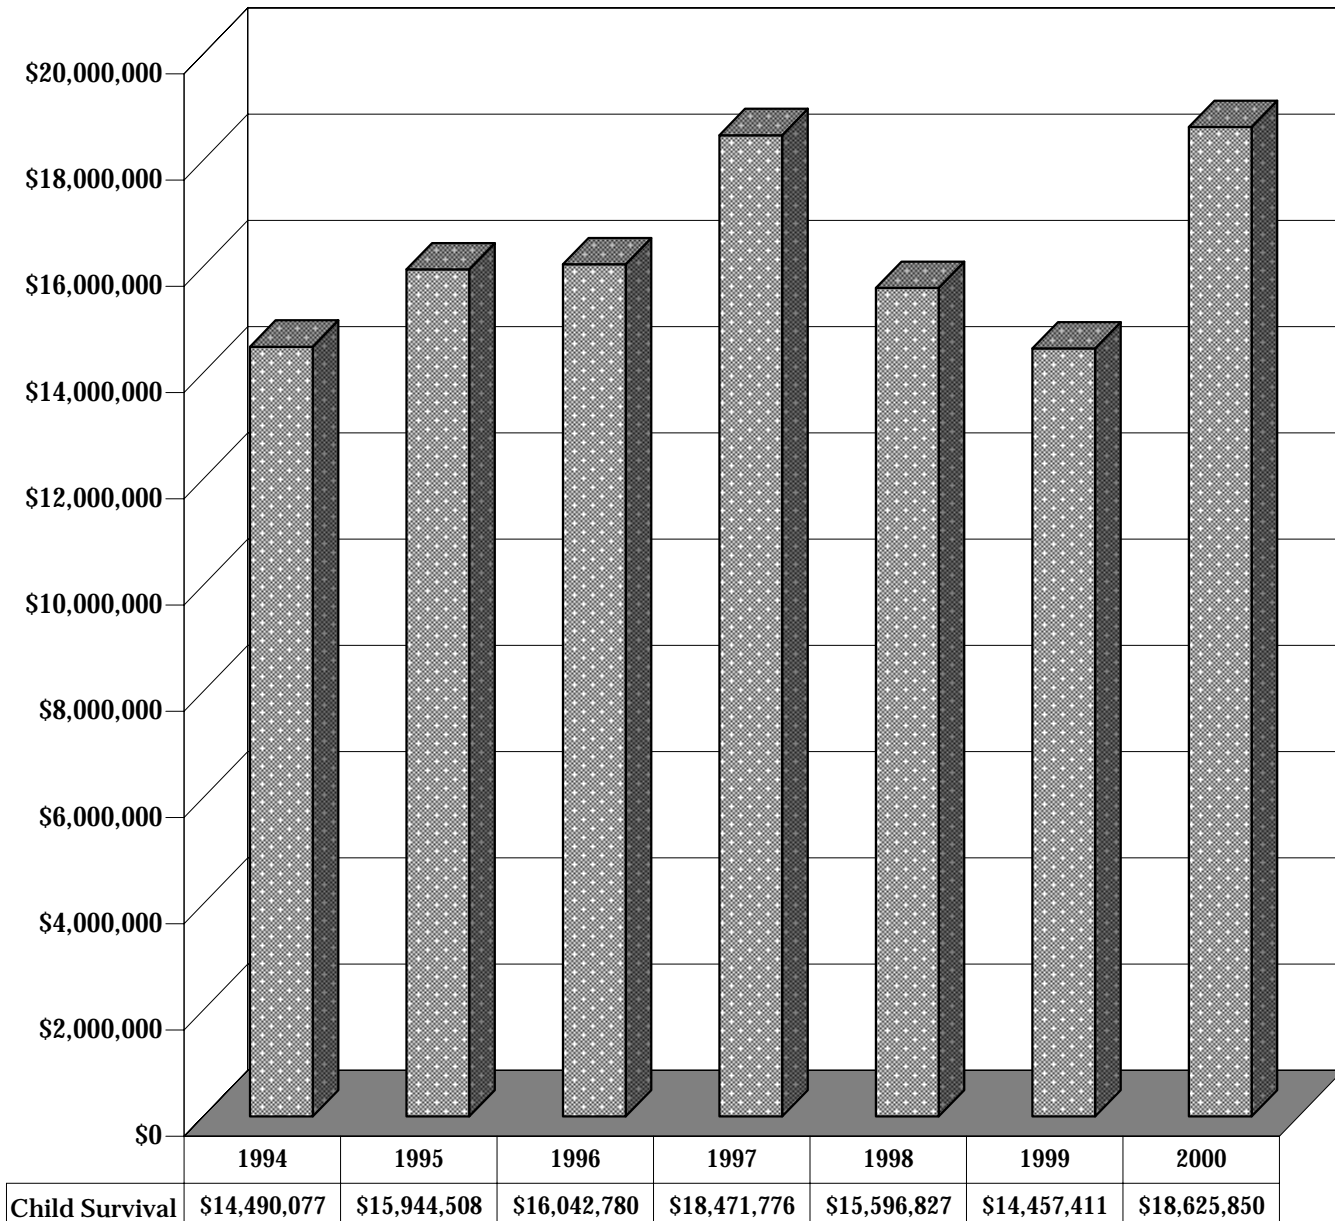

1. apply effective, innovative, integrated child survival strategies, deliverable at reasonable costs, with a high potential for sustainability – within the capability of the applicant and its partners;
2. develop synergies with other programs at the same site (such as food aid, microcredit, water & sanitation, agriculture, etc.) carried out by the same PVO or complementary to another organization; and
3. address emerging issues (such as malaria and HIV/AIDS), and employ a child survival approach to address the child health needs of the most vulnerable populations.

Cooperative Development Program

Cooperatives enable people to achieve self-reliance and lasting economic independence. These member-owned democratic and community-based associations spread economic benefits and provide opportunities for people to participate directly in democratic processes.

The Humphrey Amendment to the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, along with other legislation, has allowed the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) to dedicate substantial support and financial assistance to U.S. cooperative development organizations (CDOs) for their development activities overseas. The Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation (PVC) administers a competitive grants program for cooperative development. The program uses the expertise and resources of long-established U.S. cooperative organizations, their members, and other experts to respond to the needs of cooperatives and other group-based associations overseas.

The objectives of the Cooperative Development Program are:

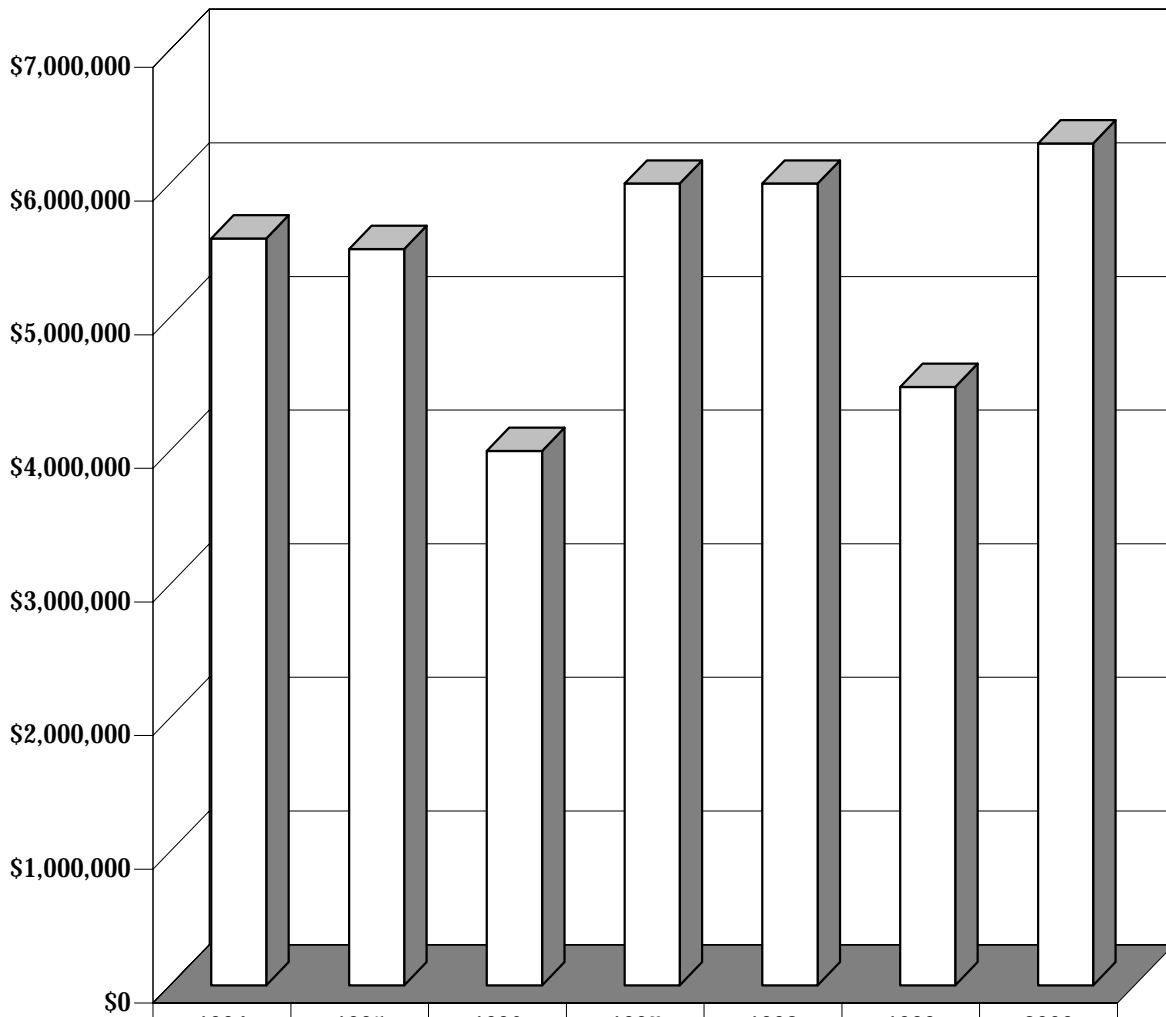

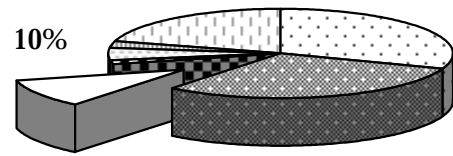

- to build the organizational commitment of U.S. CDOs and their members to support international cooperative development activities;
- to promote the growth of cooperative systems in developing countries and emerging democracies;
- to increase the capacities of indigenous cooperatives through technical assistance, training, and advisory services;
- to encourage the establishment of long-term partnerships between U.S. CDOs and host country organizations based on sound service, information sharing, and/or economic links, to ensure program sustainability;
- to support the program development activities and services of indigenous cooperative development activities internationally; and
- to support efforts to broaden the development resource funding base of U.S. CDOs and enhance the long-term sustainability of cooperative development activities overseas.

CDOs work in many sectors including credit, agribusiness, technology transfer, housing, micro-enterprise and small business development, financing and marketing, rural telephone and electric services, and insurance. They are effective grassroots organizations which represent member interests in democratic societies.

CDOs that have long-term associations with USAID's Cooperative Development Program may mentor eligible U.S. cooperatives that are interested in partnering to implement their cooperative development activities overseas.

Development Education Program

The Development Education Program provides small grants to support the efforts of U.S. nonprofit organizations to educate Americans about developing countries, the development process, and the importance of developing countries to the United States.

The U.S. Agency for International Development's (USAID's) Development Education Program was authorized in 1980 in response to the Report of the Presidential Commission on World Hunger (under the Biden-Pell Amendment to the International Security and Development Cooperation Act). In 1982, the Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation (PVC) established a grants program to promote the widespread discussion and analysis of the causes of hunger and poverty. The program is referred to as both the Development Education Program and the Biden-Pell Program.

The Development Education Program is a public/private initiative designed to foster interest and participation in international development among U.S. citizens. The program supports activities by private, not-for-profit organizations to educate large segments of the American public about U.S. humanitarian relief and development programs overseas. The program helps build national understanding of the importance of these programs to the United States.

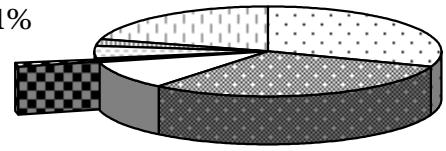

PVC has awarded grants to a broad cross-section of more than 100 organizations including private voluntary organizations engaged in development assistance; universities; radio, television, and print media; cooperatives; service clubs; trade associations; and national membership organizations.

The Development Education Program's current strategy emphasizes leveraging financial resources and obtaining the maximum educational impact through partnerships between U.S. nonprofit organizations involved in international development and U.S.-based domestic membership organizations or trade associations with natural links to large segments of the American public.

Programs supported by the Biden-Pell grants have a theme of "local-global links." In other words, the programs demonstrate the connections between domestic and international concerns and communicate why international development assistance is in the best long-term interest of the United States. Grantees focus on the environment, trade, health, or other issues that resonate in American communities, and also demonstrate global interdependence. These issues, presented objectively, stimulate informed discussion about development issues and their connection to U.S. concerns.

Ocean Freight Reimbursement - Worldwide Program

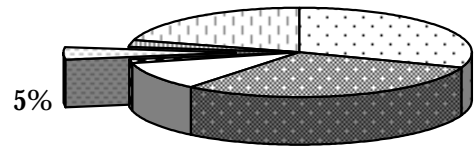

The Ocean Freight Reimbursement (OFR) Worldwide Program provides subsidies to private and voluntary organizations (PVOs) to ship humanitarian supplies and equipment overseas in support of privately funded development and humanitarian assistance programs.

The OFR Worldwide Program is the oldest ongoing PVO support program. The Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, Section 123 (b), authorized the creation of the program and, as amended, allows the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) to subsidize registered U.S. PVOs in their ocean freight transportation costs. The program is unique because it allows small and newly registered PVOs to participate in an Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation grant process that is highly competitive, yet less complex.

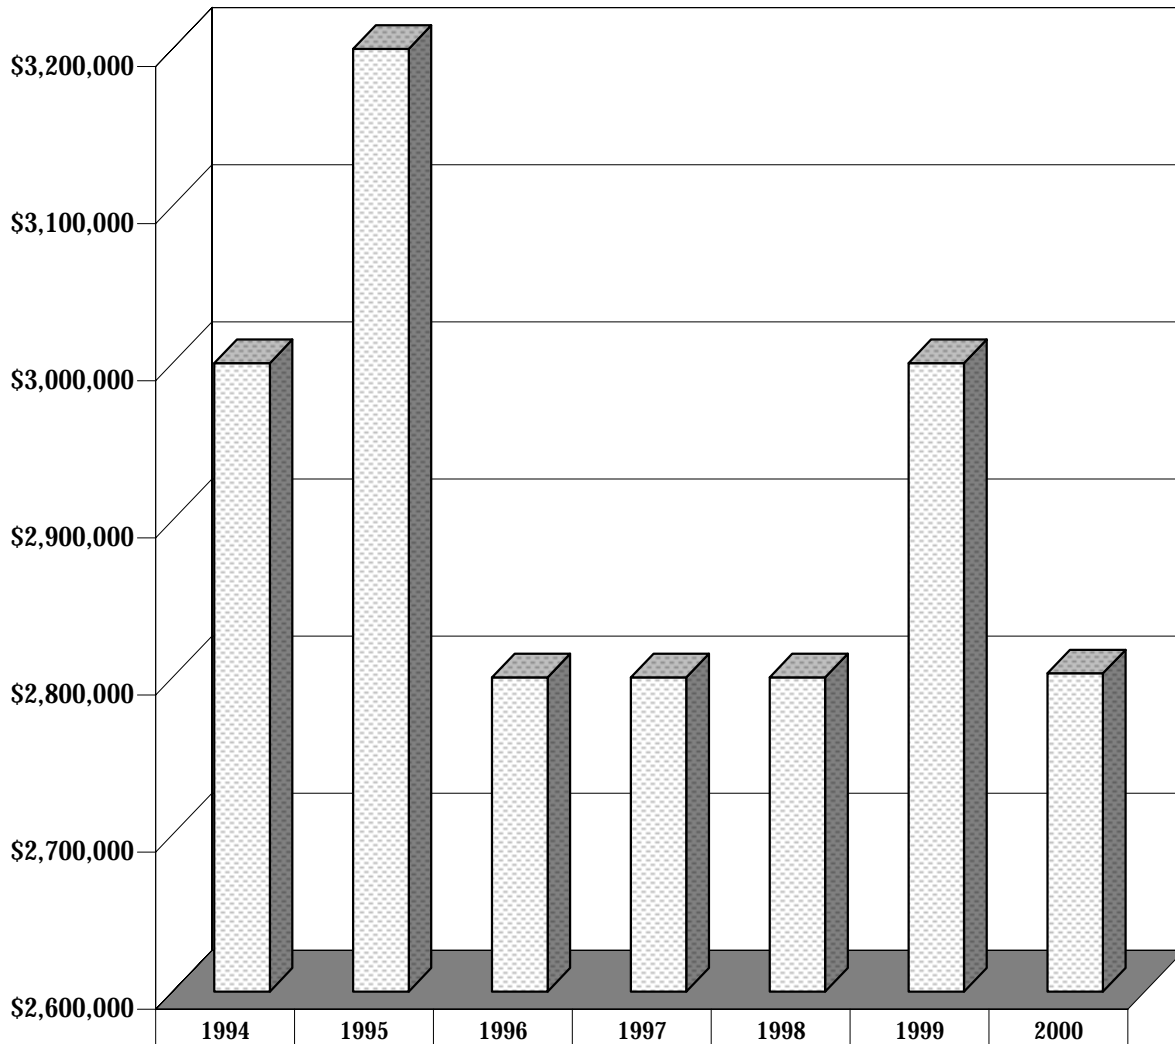

Small competitive grants are provided by the program to U.S. PVOs each year. Funds are used to reimburse the PVOs for the cost of transporting donated commodities (such as medical supplies, agricultural equipment, educational supplies, and building equipment) to developing countries.

The OFR Worldwide Program helps USAID expand its pool of developing partners by reaching out to small and/or newly registered PVOs, and by providing grants to many first-time applicants. In fiscal year 2000, the Agency funded 53 PVOs in the OFR program. These organizations shipped 8,000 tons of commodities valued at $120 million at a cost of $2.8 million to the program. Although USAID reimburses the costs of ocean freight, participating PVOs are responsible for ancillary costs such as commodity acquisition, warehousing, insurance, local transportation, and distribution. The program leverages resources many times the size of USAID funding. The overall private-public match of OFR activities is 43 to 1.

Support to Victims of Torture Program

The Support to Victims of Torture Grant Program supports U.S. private and voluntary organizations (PVOs) to institutionally strengthen foreign treatment centers and programs which provide basic services to torture survivors and builds the local capacity of these programs.

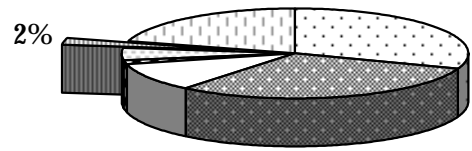

The Torture Victims Relief Act of 1998 authorized USAID to provide assistance for the rehabilitation of torture victims in foreign countries by supporting centers and programs designed to help victims recover from the physical and psychological effects of torture. This year the Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation (PVC) launched a new competitive grants program to improve the capacity of foreign treatment centers and programs. Grants will help these programs provide basic services to victims, and will also be used to train treatment practitioners, build advocacy skills, and strengthen the organizational and financial management practices of these organizations.

Initial program activities will focus on selecting and supporting 12 treatment centers in five regions to include Africa (Uganda, Ethiopia, South Africa), Asia (India, Nepal, Cambodia), the Near East (West Bank), Latin America (Mexico, Peru, Guatemala), and Eastern Europe (Romania, Bulgaria). These centers represent both mature treatment programs with strong leadership and programs that have just begun activities and require substantial technical assistance and organizational program support. All centers will be action learning models that have development of advocacy programs, can identify organizational sustainability measures, and will improve quality services to torture survivors. A key component will be the dissemination of results, tools, and approaches to enhance the programs of other treatment centers.

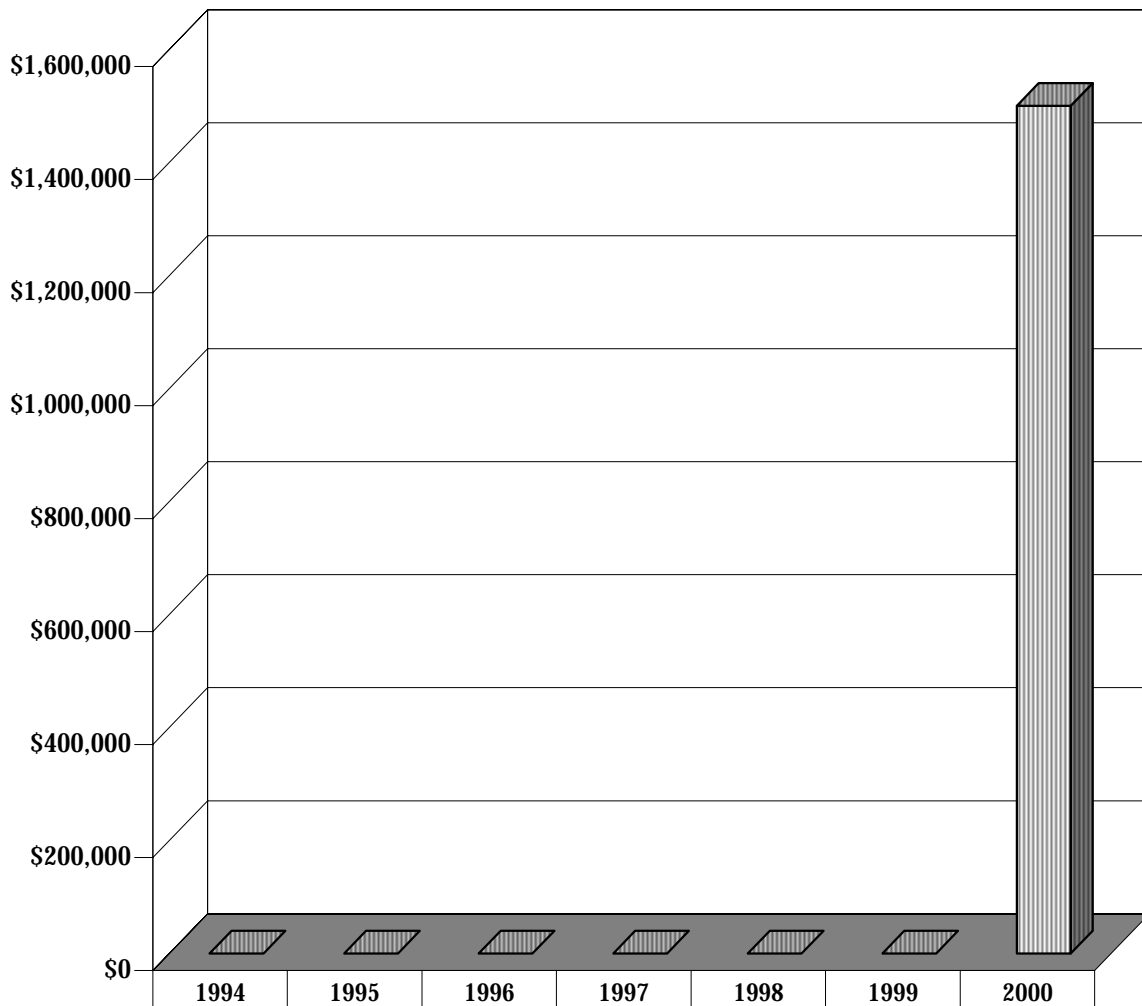

Program components include:

- extensive and participatory needs assessments of local programs and advocacy efforts;
- international, regional, and local technical assistance on clinical advances, advocacy, organizational development, monitoring, and evaluation;
- regional workshops and the award of small operating support and technology enhancement grants; and
- assistance in facilitating the communication of new approaches and results through website development, information exchanges, and seminars.

Farmer-to-Farmer Program

The Farmer-to-Farmer (FTF) Program provides voluntary technical assistance, on a people-to-people basis, to farmers, farm groups, agricultural education institutions, and agribusinesses to enhance the potential for substantial increases in food processing, production, and marketing, which, in turn, stimulates private enterprise and democratic institutions.

The FTF Program was initially authorized by Congress in the 1985 Farm Bill. The program began as a pilot project to provide technical assistance to farmers in Central America and the Caribbean, and is commonly referred to as the Worldwide FTF (WW-FTF) Program. In 1986, the program was expanded for worldwide operation. In early 1987, the Peace Corps began implementing FTF activities through a Participating Agency Service Agreement (PASA). The FTF Program was re-authorized through 2002 in the 1996 Farm Bill.

In 1991, a Special Initiative of the FTF Program was authorized as one of the first U.S. assistance programs for the New Independent States (NIS), and it continues to operate in all twelve of the NIS countries. The program is referred to as the NIS-FTF Program.

As stated in its authorizing legislation, the purpose of the FTF Program is “to assist farmers in increasing food production and distribution by improving the effectiveness of farming and marketing operations.” The program relies on the expertise of volunteers from U.S. farms, land grant universities, cooperatives, private agribusinesses, and nonprofit farm organizations to respond to the local needs of farmers and organizations in host countries.

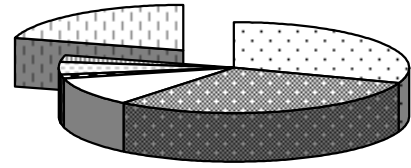

The FTF Program is an effective and flexible mechanism for transferring the technology, knowledge, and skills of U.S. agricultural volunteers to farmers, farm groups, agricultural education institutions, and agribusinesses worldwide. Volunteers have been recruited from all 50 states and the District of Columbia. In general, these volunteers are not overseas development professionals, but rather individuals who have domestic careers, farms, and agribusinesses, or are retired and want to participate in development efforts. Volunteers spend about a month in the host country.

FTF volunteers have provided assistance to individual farm enterprises, cooperatives, farmers’ associations, agribusinesses, rural credit institutions, and agricultural youth groups. Many times partnerships develop between host country organizations and U.S. organizations, some of which are formalized by written agreement.

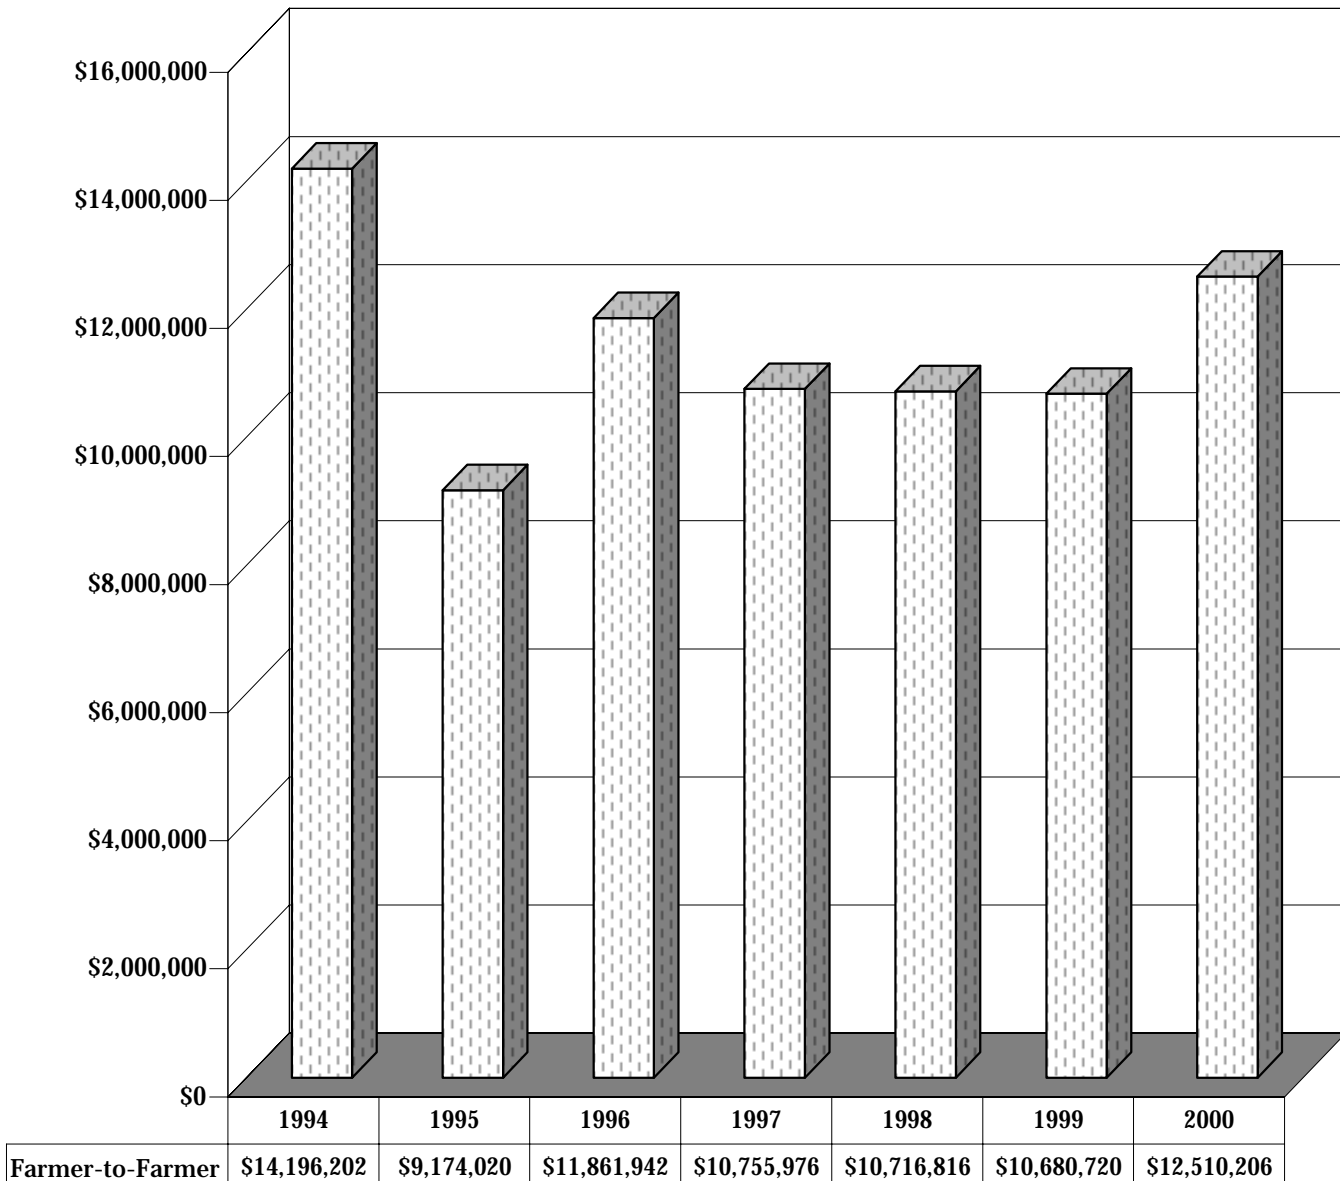

In the WW-FTF Program, more than 2,100 volunteer assignments have been completed since 1991 in more than 70 countries. In the NIS Program (NIS-FTF), more than 4,200 assignments have been completed since 1992.
